The Worship of Serpents. The small town of Werda, in the kingdom of Dahomey, is celebrated for its "temple of serpents," a long building in which the priests keep upward of a thousand serpents of all sizes, which they feed with the birds and frogs brought to them as offerings by the

It often happens that some of these serpents make their way out of the temple into the town, and the priests have the greatest difficulty in coaxing them back. To kill a serpent intentionally is a crime punished with death and if a European were to kill one the authority of the king himself would scarcely suffice to save his life. Any one killing a serpent unintentionally must inform the priest of what has occurred and go through the course of purification which takes place once a

Artificial Limbs.

"A manufacturer or dealer in artificial limbs who wears a cork arm or leg himself is much better equipped for business than his competitors who are sound," said a man who uses a cork "In fact, it has become a sort of unwritten law among us to patronize such men when possible. Sentimental reasons may have something to do with the case, but I guess the chief reason is that we consider that if a man can make a limb for himself that fits like the paper on the wall he can make it for others. Manufacturers of artificial limbs know this, and frequently you will find an advertisement like 'The So-and-so artificial leg is built by a man who is wearing one and who knows from experience what

An Admiral's Stories.

One of the English admirals has a choice collection of stories at the expense of laymen placed in office at the admiral ty as a consequence of a turn of the political wheel. Of one lord of the admirality be told a delighted house of commons how, receiving a report of disnster to a ship couched in technical phrase, he wrote a reply remonstrating, with the officer for his use of bad language. An order civilian lord, looking over a chart and observing that one of his majesty's ships, homeward bound, passed within a space of two inches on the chart an Island where cast-anway sallors were sheltering, wanted to know why it could not call and relieve them. The Glass Snake.

The slowworm is the snake which country people tell you has the peculiar property of breaking itself into bits each piece afterward surviving. The truth differs slightly from the legend The slowworm is a timid creature and when first captured tightens all its muscles, thus reducing itself to a re markably rigid state, in which condition it will no doubt snap like a dry twig; but, needless to say, only the upper and vital portions survive the ordeal.-London Globe.

What the Jury Thought. During a trial for assault in Melbourne a club, a rail, an ax handle, a knife and a shotgun were exhibited as the instruments with which the deed was done. It was also shown that the assaulted man defended himself with a scythe, a revolver, a pitchfork, a chisel, a hand saw and a dog. The jury decided that they'd have given a sovereign apiece to have seen the fight.
